CME Wire and Cable Inc. would like to update you regarding the stricter guidance of “shelter in place” and “safer at home” requirements in response to the COVID-19 pandemic issued by the Governments at Local, State and National levels. This guidance states that companies whose work falls within “critical infrastructure industries” that are deemed essential and may continue operations during this challenging time.

Products and Services provided by CME Wire and Cable are critical in the fight against COVID-19. We are an important piece of the supply chain for many essential and critical businesses and services in utility, commercial, industrial and institutional markets that are making extraordinary efforts to fight this pandemic. Energy transmitted through our products is critical for the operation of many services engaged directly or indirectly to those that are in the front lines to fight against this deadly Coronavirus.

For now, all our warehouses and manufacturing facilities are operating. The Canadian and Mexican borders have been closed to non-essential travel, however, cross border trade and commerce continues. We are closely following the COVID-19 situation and making decisions that reflect our commitment to safety of our employees, society and needs of our customers.

Please feel free to reach out to us regarding any current and future orders.

Thank you for your support.
